TWO MEN IN JAL

According to the police, Black had a skeleton key and two flat keys in his possession. On one of the boxes was the name of "Mme. Doblin, One Hundred and Tairtleth street and Seventh avenue."

The police of the West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street station were notified to make an investigation.

Mme. Doolin was seen at her store and said the robbers had broken in her front doors and helped themselves. Her husband, Robert Doblin, one home at a late hour and saw that the store had been entered. He immediately reported to the police, and found that the two men were under arrest. He said there must have been more than two in the robbery, as all the goods missing were not contained in the bundles carried by Black and Blishop.

J. W. Hough, who lives above the millinery shop, said he returned home shortly after midnight, and saw two men leaving the place. They looked back and said "Good-by!" to some ona inside.
